Key Highlights & Insights from the 23rd World Energy Congress - a personal view

The World Energy Council holds its global World Energy Congress every three years and in October 2016, the 23rd World Energy Congress was held in Istanbul. The build up to this Congress was unusually turbulent given the political and security situation in Turkey prior to the Congress. The impact on the Congress and how the Turkish Organising Committee dealt with these challenges will be discussed.

Also, the agenda of the 4-day Congress covered a wide range of energy topics. Personal highlights and insights that emerged from the discussions and presentations will be shared.

The Congress managed to achieve some "firsts" - for example 5 Presidents all attended one of the sessions at the same time. This experience and others will be shared in this presentation.

Finally, the 7-point statement, with its call to action that the Council published ahead of the Congress will be discussed and its relevance to the South African energy world will be commented on.

Presented by

Dave Wright
